On
Nuances of Body Language

Topic :	Faculty Development Program on Nuances of Body Language.
Date of event :	July 20, 2012
Aim of the Event :	“60% of all human communication is nonverbal body language; 30% is your tone, so that means 90% of what you're saying ain't coming out of your mouth”- Alex Hitch The aim of this session was to: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• create awareness about the importance of non verbal communication with special reference to body language• to understand how other people perceive us and be able to send the right message• to be able to read the signals that another person is sending back.
Event Report in brief :	The session was conducted by Dr. Vineeta Prasad, associate vice president - liquid. The central idea of this session was- “I speak two languages- body and English”. The session began with a quiz illustrating the importance of non verbal communication and various positive and negative body gestures. Instructors played various audio-visual clippings to illustrate that the world's best communicators have strong body language, a commanding presence that reflects confidence, competence and charisma. The most interesting part of the session was that of a role play conducted on an interview situation in which our faculty members were divided into groups; such that some of them played role of the candidate and others played the character of interviewer.

	The session was highly activity driven and required minimal trainer dependence. It included wide variety of faculty engaging exercises, contextual and real life scenarios. It was indeed an enlightening & knowledgeable session for all the faculty members and will guide them to make the students competent and skilled to handle real life situations like interviews, presentations, meetings and any kind of interpersonal interaction.
