

Faculty Development Programme on “Case Writing and its Application”

TITLE	Faculty Development Programme on “Case Writing and its Application”
Date	Mar 09, 2019 - Mar 09, 2019
Summary	Case studies can be produced by following a formal research method. These case studies are likely to appear in formal research venues, as journals and professional conferences, rather than popular works. The resulting body of 'case study research' has long had a prominent place in many disciplines and professions, ranging from psychology, anthropology, sociology, and political science to education, clinical science, social work, and administrative science. In doing case study research, the "case" being studied may be an individual, organization, event, or action, existing in a specific time and place. For instance, clinical science has produced both well-known case studies of individuals and also case studies of clinical practices. The purpose of the FDP was to make the participants aware about case study and its application with practical exposure. Dr. Girish Taneja was the guest speaker who started lecture with meaning of concept of case study writing and publication. He differentiated the concept of case teaching and case publication. The different phases involved in case research has been discussed by him. Understanding the same helps to move in the right direction of research work related with case writing and teaching case. He mentioned that making a story and correlating it with real life example helps to understand the case publication. Thus, the primary objective of this programme was to enhance the potentiality of case writing and teaching case. The FDP helped a lot to all the participants with great knowledge and experience. All the queries were answered by the guest speaker. It was great learning experience to all the participants.
