- Motivation for the activity : Ensuring the availability of, and access to, early detection programme for cancer can significantly reduce the cancer burden in all countries. All people have the right to access quality, effective cancer treatment and services on equal terms, regardless of geography and without suffering economic hardship as a consequence. The motivation behind this activity was to make students aware of this rising disease which can be treated for some of its types, if detected at early stage.

Form B

Part 1

Aim of the event :

Breast cancer culture, sometimes also called pink ribbon culture, is the cultural outgrowth of breast cancer advocacy, the social movement that supports it, and the larger women's health movement. Breast cancer awareness is an effort to raise awareness and reduce the stigma of breast cancer through education on symptoms and treatment. Breast cancer advocacy and awareness efforts are a type of health advocacy. Supporters hope that greater knowledge will lead to earlier detection of breast cancer, which is associated with higher long-term survival rates.

Part 2

Abstract :

Women Cell of RDIAS took a footstep to spread the message of awareness among youth in collaboration with Yes2Life which is an NGO working towards creating awareness among women about breast cancer. The speakers of the session were Dr. Neeti Leekha Chhabra and Shruti Sharma from Yes2life. Madam talked about how mobile over usage can be cancerous. She also said that because of increasing mobile towers in our locality, there is a depletion of sparrows. And in near future, the other species may also get extinguished. Having mobile physically used may lead to tumour. It has been advised to use headphones or talk using loudspeakers. This event helped in sensitizing and made an impact on students as they closely realized the problems that can arise with time. They also realized that early detection is the only step that can help them to treat such disease thus this makes them aware to get a screening test every year or two.

Part 3

Conclusion

Life is not just about finding yourself but also celebrating yourselves. Living life is simple but we make it complicated. In the end we do not count the years but the life we have lived in those years is important. In order to prevent themselves from various diseases, they need to take precautions.
