Social media is one of the most important communication channels for businesses. Although there is a more generic approach to leveraging social media—by advertising on this platform—there are other ways through which a business can communicate with its customers using social media. Here are four unique ways that have evolved: Connections, Campaigns, Visualization and Round the clock presence. Prof. Diwakar Sharma - Regional Manager, Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada discussed that Social Media has already transformed the business world, making it easier for managers, job seekers, small businesses, entrepreneurs, and others to establish and maintain beneficial connections. Mr. Ajay Kumar Gupta - Director, ICSSR shared that the ability to get vital information out in a moment’s notice is a powerful reason to engage in the use of social media in the management studies. Sir also shared the research policy of ICSSR with the students and faculty members. Ms. Poonam Singh - Assistant Editor Business World shared her valuable view with the student that managers use social media sites to efficiently communicate with individuals inside and outside their organization. She also discussed the online marketing concepts to the students. The seminar was an interactive and informative one and all queries of students were addressed to their satisfaction.
